Bath.

—Diphtheria seems to have completely died out in our midst. The doctors complain of having but little to do. Thanks to our efficient board of health.

—Mr. D. T. Rouse is busy completing repairs on his corner building, in which there will be two fine stores with plate glass fronts. The stores will be ready for business this fall. We wish David every success and trust he will be ready with his "sling" to sling out good goods at very low prices.

—Angling here is increasing and parties from a distance go away more than pleased with the good results.

—People outside having got over the epidemic scare are beginning to flock into our village and find the disease was not as bad as was reported outside, the cases being altogether confined to young children.

Erinsville.

—A barn belonging to Mr. Ed. McLaughlin was burned one night last week. Cause unknown. The contents included 10 tons of hay, wagon, sleigh, buggy, fanning mill and other things.

—One day last week Mr. T. Evans took a drove of cattle to Montreal by rail. Sales reported favorable.

—Harvest operations are being pushed vigorously. Some kinds of grain are above the average. Grain harvested in good conditions.

—Mr. Jas. Blewett, formerly of this place, now of New York, wife, brother-in-law and a young friend have been visiting here the past three weeks. Great praise is due our friend, James, for his push and energy in the great city, the modern Gotham, where so many have been carried down in the whirlpool of poverty and ruin.

—Our merchants are pushing sales, each having a rig on the road. Competition is becoming keen.

Tamworth.

—Some of the boys have excursions north, where they say many and various games and sports are indulged in. The route taken is some times via Marlbank. One of their number while at a game called "log rolling" got badly left, the train on the C.P.R. being on time.

—Mr. E. McKim, jr., has purchased the cabinet shop of the Knight firm and intends to carry on the business with vigor.

—Although the attendance of the brethren was not as large as expected, the 12th of Aug. was duly celebrated by the Orangemen and a gala day was spent. Quite a number of people came in, the number of spectators being very large.

—Everybody and his wife went to the Forepaugh Show. Some 150 boarded the early train and the noon train had a goodly number.

—Jim is getting ready for cold weather.

—Business very moderate since the harvest season.

—Miss Nina Gordon has been east on a holiday.

—Harvest will soon be completed and the crop is said to be fair.

—Agricultural implements have found quite a ready sale in this vicinity.

—A very good sidewalk has been built opposite the Dominion House.

—The water is getting low in the wells, cisterns and river.

—A 90,000 brick kiln was burned lately and another of 100,000 is in course of preparation by Mr. Samson Shields.

THE CAPITAL OF CANADA.

The Spot Where Queen Victoria Dropped Her Finger.

A correspondent of the Detroit Free Press thus describes the Dominion Capital:—The years can almost be counted on the fingers of two hands that have elapsed since the day when a map of the British Possessions in North America was spread out for the inspection of Her Majesty Victoria, by the Grace of God Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India. The august lady had been left the selection of a capital for the Dominion of Canada. Mindful of the mutual ambitions and jealousies of the great cities of this American realm—Montreal, Toronto, Kingston and Quebec—she dropped her finger on a point on the map that seemed to her the best compromise between the four, and which was the junction of three rivers.

"What is there?" she is said to have asked.

"The little hamlet of Bytown, your Majesty."

"Let that be the capital of my Canadian dominion."

So spoken so done. But there were many who mocked the regal selection. A capital removed from the center of population, in a howling wilderness and on a stream with impeded navigation, Bytown seemed to have no future. But time demonstrated the wisdom of Victoria's choice. Bytown, now Ottawa, has grown to be not only an important, but a very busy city. It is located on that great artery, the Canadian Pacific. It possesses an unusually beautiful location, and is fast becoming a noted pleasure resort. From the touch of the royal finger Ottawa sprang by magic from a straggling hamlet to a handsome city of more than 30,000 souls.

At first sight the capital of the consolidated Canadas has a decided tendency to make a person tired. The vicinity of the Canadian Pacific depot is especially wearisome. It has all the appearance of a backwoods lumber town. The buildings are roughly knocked together and daubed with different pigments. The city seems to end, after two blocks of this, in an abrupt high bluff. But it is after the ascent of this bluff that the city proper breaks upon the observer, a thing of exceeding beauty. New as it is, there is no prettier Canadian city. It may be said that the streets are altogether too narrow, and that there is too frequent an attempt to architecturally aggrandize stuffy little buildings.

The Parliament buildings stand on an imposing bluff on the south bank of the Ottawa River. The location is admirable and commanding. They front on Wellington street, one of the city's principal thoroughfares, and at the back look out upon the expanse of the Ottawa River from the Rideau to the Chaudiere Falls. The architecture of the building differs from that of any structure in the United States of like character. The design is Italian Gothic, and the material used in their construction is cream-colored and red sandstone. They cost $3,000,000, and furnish a very elaborate and commodious headquarters for the government of 5,000,000 of people. The buildings, which include the departmental offices, occupy three sides of a square and face a principal street of the city. The Rideau Canal runs through a series of locks at one side of the grounds.

In the pretty suburb of New Edinburgh, across the Rideau River, is the home of the Governor-General, Rideau Hall, whence the Marquis of Lansdowne administers the government as the viceroy of Victoria. The citizens of Ottawa are very proud of this

CANADA AT THE COLONIAL.

Practical Results from the Exhibition.

Canada's contribution to the Colonial Exhibition is above all things practical. Hence it is interesting and important to note how far it is commanding success in this its chief aim and end. Last week we spoke of the trade results which may be expected to flow from the mineral display. The good effect of the game trophy is every day more and more apparent. Next week a party of eight start on a hunting tour for the North-West, and hardly a week passes but some sportsmen leave under Mr. Hubbard's directions. One might also point to the textile fabrics, the organs and pianos, and the miscellaneous manufactures, and enlarge upon the possibilities of results in each direction. But most patent of all is the outcome of the agricultural display. Canada's supreme want is population and capital. To attract both the one and the other, she properly realises that one of the best ways is through her agricultural resources. And it is from recognition of this fact in one united effort that Canada is deriving so great a benefit. Then Captain Clark, now in charge of the Agricultural Court, there can be no better authority on this point, and he emphatically says:—"The fact that we exhibit our agricultural products as one Dominion rather than as isolated Provinces is a great point. We don't spread the whole over so many courts as our friends the Australians have done. All question of jealousy between Province and Province, district and district, is entirely done away with, and we present a solid front. No matter regarding what Province inquirers want information, I can point my explanations with the products of every part, from eastern Prince Edward Island to the distant Vancouver."

The visitors to the Agricultural Court fall, according to Captain Clark, into one of the following classes:—Those having relatives and friends in Canada, those about to emigrate, the investing class, and the commercial class. To the first class, these having friends in Canada, many visitors belong, and they all have reports of these in the new land. As a whole, these reports are so far satisfactory, as showing a strong liking for the natural conditions of Canada, and a faith in their own future independence. That there should be no unfavorable reports would be as unnatural as to imagine that every settler who leaves the British shores is suited to the new life. This, however, Captain Clark finds from experience since he has been in England; that to follow up unfavorable reports with care, tracing the career of the settler at home, is generally to learn that he was and is at best indifferent to good honest work, and altogether unlikely to succeed in any country and under any circumstances. As to the second class of visitors, the benefits of the display are directly apparent in the many inquiries for literature and, what is still more sought after, personal information. London does not, of course, in itself supply an emigrating class of the most promising kind, and were it not a gathering place for all people of all grades, the result of the Exhibition in this respect might not be as desirable as it promises to be. And this cosmopolitan feature of the great metropolis will be more than ever strikingly represented next month when the special railway arrangements throughout the kingdom bring to the Exhibition the people of the agricultural districts of the Provinces. The third and fourth classes of visitors, British investors and men of commerce, take to the

VARIOUS TOPICS.

Bartley Campbell makes slow improvement at Bloomingdale Asylum, if indeed he can be said to have improved at all. Two of his hallucinations are that he is a superman being, and that the Asylum is an hotel of which he is the proprietor. In odd moments he writes verse, which is usually unintelligible.

The Audubon Society is growing, and new branches are rapidly being formed. The members pledge themselves not to kill or capture any wild bird not used for food, not to disturb or destroy the nest or eggs of any wild bird, and not to make use of the feathers of any wild bird as ornaments of dress or furniture.

Temperance women in the prohibition village of Marshalltown, Ia., watched the drug store sales of liquors for a month, and ascertained that the six druggists sold 112½ gallons of whiskey, 2,197 bottles of beer, 81 gallons of alcohol, 6 gallons of brandy, 8 gallons of gin, 1 barrel of ale, and 5 gallons of wine. It wasn't a very sickly month either.

White persons have blacked up to imitate negroes from time immemorial. For a negro to "whiten up" to perenate a white person is something new. This occurred recently in Montana, where a white child was required in a drama. A local little ducky was the only child obtainable, and much grease paint was used in getting him to just the proper complexion.

The Comtesse de Paris, according to the London Truth, inherited all the sporting tastes of her family. In France, she was partial to hunting and shooting, breaking shittish colts, driving four-in-hand, or tiring out three or four horses at a chase. She dressed in a neat, masculine style, wore stand up collars, soft felt hat without feathers, and preferred waterproofs to luxurious mantles when driving her team of ponies in bad weather.

Deputy Marshall Trammell journeyed through Union county, Georgia, recently and stayed a night at the house of a reputable citizen near Blairville. The next morning when he went to feed his horse he found it without mane on all, and bleeding from two ugly wounds in the side. The saddle and bridle had been cut in pieces, and a note pinned to a piece of the saddle warned him to get out of the country. He had to walk to Blairville, and was shot at twice on the way. This was all the work of moonshiners.

Peter Roux of Mene Lake took his family to Bodie, Cal., to celebrate the Fourth. His six-year-old daughter wanted to go home and started on foot. She ought to have gone south, but went north among the mountains and canons. When the moon went down she crept under a sage bush and slept, but awoke at daylight and went on. In the mean time Bodie had offered $100 for her rescue, and a searching party with Indians started out. They found her next day trudging along, hungry, but undismayed. She had walked twenty-six miles. She said she wasn't afraid.

One of the shrewdest of English Judges is as remarkable for the quickness of his eyes and ears as for the keenness of his intellect. The other day a stranger in court, spying a friend, addressed him in a stage whisper with "Hallo, old fellow! I haven't seen you lately. Are you all right?" The remark was hardly heard beyond the nearest bystanders, and there was, consequently, considerable bewilderment among those engaged in the case before the court when the Judge, looking up from his notes, ob-

Marquis of Lansdowne administers the government as the viceroy of Victoria. The citizens of Ottawa are very proud of this shadowy semblance of royalty. They were prouder still of what some were pleased to denominate the preceding "reign" of her Royal Highness the Princess Louise and her consort, the Marquis of Lorne. Lansdowne does not have enough governing to do to trouble his rest at night. Sir John A. Macdonald relieves him of most of these burthens. He is a very blue-blooded figure-head and that is all, but he costs Canada the pleasing stipend of $50,000 per annum besides the maintenance of Rideau Hall.

Looking to the northward from old Barracks Hill, the rocky promontory on which the Parliament buildings stand, the eye crosses the broad Ottawa River, the little fringe of settlement on the opposite bank and then spans a long vista of green and almost virgin country that stretches away for many miles to the foot hills of the Height of Land. It is a beautiful landscape. This all lies in the Province of Quebec. It is an unbroken wilderness, except for the lumber camps of the Upper Gatineau and an occasional very small group of French squatters. Communication with these remote camps and petty settlements is very difficult, as may be illustrated by the fact that just the other day a horrible murder in one of the Gatineau lumber camps reached the Ottawa newspapers about two weeks old. It is related in Ottawa that the few people in this expanse of country only pay taxes about once in five years and then at the earnest solicitation of a militia company sent up from the capital.

Ottawa has no tributary farming country worth speaking of, although the railroads are developing that portion of Ontario north and west of the city very rapidly.

The city, now the seat of Britain's American domain, may yet see itself the capital of a mighty rival of our own greatest government on earth. The Canadian Pacific has opened up to her an empire of timber, coal, grazing and grain country. It has already knit the people of Canada into a harmonious whole. There are dreamers about the Parliament buildings who confidently expect to one day hear a Canadian Pacific conductor shout: "Ottawa! Change cars for New Orleans, New York, Upernavik, Hudson Bay, San Francisco, Sitka and Peking!"

Present Need.

More gentleness, more sympathy, more consideration, more knowledge of character, more real respect for one another, are needed in all the relations of life. Something of the old chivalry needs to be revived. Let there be more deference of husband to wife, of brother to sister, of parent to child, and homes will become more blessed. Let there be more deference of employers to employed, of wealth to poverty, and many social problems will be settled. Let the strong defer to the weak, the healthy to the sick, the wise to the unlearned, the skilful to the unskilful, the righteous to the erring, and the roots of equity will be strengthened, and the rich fruits of human love and happiness will abound.

Edward Lacey of Lawiston, Me., stood on a street corner the other day and noticed a gray-haired stranger approaching. The man said: "My name is John Lacey. I'm a stranger here, but I've got a brother living here whom I haven't seen in thirty years. His name is Edward Lacey. Can you tell me where he lives?" Mr. Lacey said he'd show the stranger where Edward Lacey lived, and he led him to his own house and then made himself known to tricts of the Provinces. The third and fourth classes of visitors, British investors and men of commerce, take to the but slowly, and take long to digest them. They must not be hurried; to hurry them is often to arouse their fears of some "Yankee trick." But though progression is slow it is at least sure, and in this sense satisfactory. To speak of one class of agricultural exhibits—grains, seeds, and milling products—inquiries are constant for the addresses of shippers. The quality of these products is happily a foregone conclusion with most of these men of commerce. But with some there still remains that vague and rapidly vanishing prejudice against all things "Canadian"—a prejudice which should teach producers this moral:—"To send second-rate products to a central emporium such as England is to raise a wall of prejudice which it will take years of good imports to overcome: send nothing if you can't be sure it will bear close inspection and comparison." Canadian meal and flour are products in which extended inquiry seems prevalent, but most of all the Red Fife wheat of Manitoba and the North-West claims attention. Of this the only complaint is that enough is not to be had. And why? For the very simple reason that the North-West has not hitherto had the supply to meet these outside demands. "Local demands," says Captain Clark, "and the wants of Ontario millers are such that the amount available for export out of Canada has been next to nothing. This year, on account of the splendid crop that is ripening, the problem of quantity for export to Europe will be solved, and the amount will increase each season when once a genuine start has been made toward direct shipments. Dealers here are willing and anxious to have the wheat, but their business is such that they must be able to calculate upon a fairly steady supply season after season. The very irregular and isolated quantities of the first-rate grain which it has in the past been possible to send do not at all answer the purpose."

Social Importance of the Fireside.

The fireside is a seminary of infinite importance. It is important because it is universal, and because the education it bestows, being woven in with the wool of childhood, gives form and color to the whole texture of life. There are few who can receive the honours of a college, but all are graduates of the hearth. The learning of the university may fade from the recollection, its classic lore may moulder in the halls of memory; but the simple lessons of home, enamelled upon the heart of childhood, defy the rust of year, and outline the more mature but less vivid picture of after years. So deep, so lasting, indeed are the impressions of early life, that you often see a man in the imbecility of age holding fresh in his recollection the events of childhood, while all the wide space between that and the present hour is a blasted and forgotten. You have, perchance, seen an old obliterated portrait and in the have it cleaned and restored y seen it fade away, while a perfect picture, painted to view. This portrait the canvas is no longer and though it may after-design, it shine through tene while Such is Providence

He'd Vote the Way His Master Did.

Old Tam Murray, who was well known for his Radical opinions, was interviewed at the last general election by the laird's wife, who was canvassing for the local Tory candidate, and great curiosity was experienced by Tam's comrades as to what reception the lady would meet with. "Weel, how gat ye on wi' my leddy?" was the first question asked at Tam, as he presented himself at the smithy on the evening of the interview. "Oh, brawly," said Tam, with a twinkle in his eye: "I'm thinkin' there'll be a pheasant up my way the morn." "Ay, man! what said she? Was she askin' ye to vote for Sir George?" "Ay, an' I pleased the body gran', for I tellt her I was to vote the way the maister voted. Ye see the maister'll vote for the man that he likes best, an' I'll vote for the man that I like best, an' that's votin' the same way as the maister does, isn't it?"

Ha!

When trade grew slack, and bills fell due, the tradesman's face grew long and blue: his dreams were troubled through the night with sheriffs' bailiffs all in sight. At last his wife unto him said, "Rise up at once, get out of bed, and get your paper, ink, and pen, and say these words unto all men: 'My goods I wish to sell to you, and to your wives and daughters too; my prices are so very low, that all will buy before they go.'" He did as his good wife advised, and in the paper advertised. Crowds came and bought of all he had, his bills were paid, his dreams were glad; and he will tell you to this day how well did printer's ink repay. He boasteth, with a knowing wink, how he was saved by printer's ink.

VARIOUS TOPICS.

Bartley Campbell makes slow improvement at Bloomingdale Asylum, if indeed he can be said to have improved at all. Two of his hallucinations are that he is a superman being, and that the Asylum is an hotel of which he is the proprietor. In odd moments he writes verse, which is usually unintelligible.

The Audubon Society is growing, and new branches are rapidly being formed. The members pledge themselves not to kill or capture any wild bird not used for food, not to disturb or destroy the nest or eggs of any wild bird, and not to make use of the feathers of any wild bird as ornaments of dress or furniture.

Temperance women in the prohibition village of Marshalltown, Ia., watched the drug store sales of liquors for a month, and ascertained that the six druggists sold 1124 gallons of whiskey, 2,197 bottles of beer, 81 gallons of alcohol, 6 gallons of brandy, 8 gallons of gin, 1 barrel of ale, and 5 gallons of wine. It wasn't a very sickly month either.

White persons have blacked up to imitate negroes from time immemorial. For a negro to "whiten up" to personate a white person is something new. This occurred recently in Montana, where a white child was required in a drama. A local little darky was the only child obtainable, and much grease paint was used in getting him to just the proper complexion.

The Comtesse de Paris, according to the London Truth, inherited all the sporting tastes of her family. In France, she was partial to hunting and shooting, breaking skittish colts, driving four-in-hand, or tiring out three or four horses at a chase. She dressed in a neat, masculine style, wore stand up collars, soft felt hat without feathers, and preferred waterproofs to luxurious mantles when driving her team of ponies in bad weather.

Deputy Marshall Trammell journeyed through Union county, Georgia, recently and stayed all night at the house of a reputable citizen near Blairville. The next morning when he went to feed his horse he found it without mane on tail, and bleeding from two ugly wounds in the side. The saddle and bridle had been cut in pieces, and a note pinned to a piece of the saddle warned him to get out of the country. He had to walk to Blairville, and was shot at twice on the way. This was all the work of moonshiners.

Peter Roux of Mene Lake took his family to Bodie, Cal., to celebrate the Fourth. His six-year-old daughter wanted to go home and started on foot. She ought to have gone south, but went north among the mountains and canons. When the moon went down she crept under a sage bush and slept, but awoke at daylight and went on. In the mean time Bodie had offered $100 for her rescue, and a searching party with Indians started out. They found her next day trudging along, hungry, but undismayed. She had walked twenty-six miles. She said she wasn't afraid.

WORTHY Of Confidence.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla is a medicine that, during nearly 40 years, in all parts of the world, has proved its efficacy as the best blood alterative known to medical science.

SARSAPARILLA (extracted from the root of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla) is its base, and its powers are enhanced by the extracts of Yellow Dock and Silingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other potent ingredients.

IS your blood vitiated by derangements of the digestive and assimilatory functions? Is it tainted by Scrofula? or does it contain the poison of Mercury or Contagious Disease?

THE leading physicians of the United States, who know the composition of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, say that nothing else so good for the purification of the blood is within the range of pharmacy.

ONLY by the use of this remedy is it possible for a person who has corrupted blood to attain sound health and prevent transmission of the destructive taint to posterity.

THOROUGHLY effective renovation of the system must include not only the removal of corruption from the blood, but its enrichment and the strengthening of the vital organs.

RELIABLE witnesses, all over the world, testify that this work is better accomplished by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA than by any other remedy.

BLOOD that is corrupted through disease is made pure, and blood weakened through diminution of the red corpuscles is made strong, by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

PURIFYING up the blood and building the system require time in serious cases, but benefit will be derived from the use of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA more speedily than from anything else.

MEDICINE for which like effects are falsely claimed, is abundant in the market, under many names, but the only preparation that has stood the test of time, and proved worthy of the world's confidence, is

Frank Bunton and Jim Adams of Muskegon, Carter county, Ky., were enemies. This was why Adams gave Mrs. Bunton a thrashing when her husband was away, and that was why Bunton loaded his gun with buckshot and went gunning for Adams. The latter, who was playing cards saw his enemy coming. He held a good hand, and, laying it face down, asked his friends to wait until he had settled Bunton. He drew his pistol and crawled under a freight car, and when Bunton, who had had not seen him, came along, fired and missed him. Bunton saw Adams peering from under the car and fired a lead of buckshot into his upturned forehead, killing him instantly.

In declining the Bishopric of Edinburgh, Canon Liddon says that, for one reason: "During a great part of the last year I was seriously out of health, so much so as to be obliged to give up my regular occupations nearly altogether; and, although by God's mercy, and as a consequence of the long rest which the doctors insisted on, I am feeling fairly well now, I have yet to discover how far or how long a time I can return to my old habits of work. Until this is clear, it would appear at least doubtful whether I ought to undertake new and very serious duties." The Canon's delicate constitution gives his friends much solicitude, and he will probably never be a well man.

Donaldson, the swimmer, recently swam the Mohawk at Schenectady tied hand and feet. A young athlete thought that he could do the same, and after a friend had well tied him he started to cross the river. Half way across he gave out and went down. His frightened friend in a boat tried to get him into the boat, but couldn't. Neither could he untie the ropes. Meanwhile the swimmer was taken with severe cramps. Finally the man in the boat tied a rope around the swimmer's neck, and has towed the half-drowned athlete to shore, where it took considerable rubbing and stimulant to reduce the cramps and the youth in good condition again.

Lord Hartington, the Liberal leader has been Mr. Gladstone's opponent recent political struggle, is a man of great energy, with a remarkable love for study, and with a most dignified manner. He does not court popularity, and affects a manner of indifference when he comes into public life. Oddly enough, he is regarded by some as a rather tiresome person who prefers the quiet sport of an ant.
